turned in the Shape of Money After Quarter of a Century. PHILADELPHIA, PA., April 1 .- A. Squires was Saturday paid $2 201.78 by Superintendent Fox of the Mint. Mr. Squires, it will be remembered, is the old Californi miner who presented himself at the Minta few months ago and produced an old yel low piece of paper on which could be see thing had been written there, and which be claim d was a receipt for gold dust which he had deposited with the offi-cers of the Philadelphia Mint in 1855, amounting to $2,201.78. The mint officials upon referring to the books of that date, ound that a deposit of such a nature hal been made at that time, and had never been called for. Mr. Fox questioned the oll miner, and became convinced that Davis, a stone mason employed in the aque there was some truth in his story, and duct tunnel, explained the process of build-that he was the party referred to in the ing "nice little buildeed walls" to concern authority to pay the money over, he referred the matter to the authorities at Washington. He sent twentyfive or thirty pages of deposi-tion papers to the Capital, and had Squires send him his photograph, which he sent to California for the purpose identification. He also sent to variou parties, both in California and Wheeling Squires' home, and they all sent back word that he was a thoroughly honest man, and sent such other testimony tha proved beyond a doubt that Squires was the man he represented himself to be. The authorities at Washington were also convinced of the truthfulness of his claim and ordered the amount to be

RUN DOWN IN A FOG.

The Steamer Wyanoke Collides with the Schooner Ruth Darling, off the Delaware Capes—The Schooner Sunk and Two Lives Lost,

NORFOLK, Va., March 29 .- The Old Dominion steamship Wyanoke, from New York, arrived here last night five hours late, after having been in collision off the Delaware capes with the schooner Ruth Darling yesterday morning. At the time of the colision a dense fog prevailed which was so thick that the man in the schooner's bows says that he could not see ahead more than half the vessel's length. When the Wyanoke struck the schooner her sharp bows cut clear through her and she sank ten minutes afterwards. As the Wyanoke struck the schooner, Arthur Ashton, a seaman, jumped from the rigging and caught her anchor chains and thus saved himself.

Captain Lowell, who was at the schooner's wheel at the time of the disaster, and seaman Charles Harrison were lost. Chief Mate Bradford Browne was insensible when rescued from the paddle wheel of the ship, which he had caught hold of as it passed over him. He had his nose and right shoulder broken and there was a terrible gash over his forehead. On the arrival of the ship here he was sent to St. Vincent's the snip here he was sent to be. Vincents Hospital, where he now lies in a precarious condition. A. Harrison, Frank Traptoe and another seaman were saved by means of ropes thrown from the steamer.

A MARINE WONDER.

Naval Officers Expect That the New Tor-pedo Boat Will Astonish the World— Description of the Singular Craft.

BRISTOL, R. I., March 29.-The work on the new torpedo boat for the navy is fast nearing completion and the Herreshoffs expect to have it ready for trial during the coming May. Its hull is all in place and the turtle back shaped deck is finished, except the fit ting of a few more steel plates. The Gov-ernment demands that this vessel shall make twenty knots an hour on the official trial. At the time the contract was signed the Herreshoffs estimated the boat's speed for the trial run at twenty-three knots an hour. Naval officers confidently believe that this new torpedo boat will prove as great a wonder as did the Vesuvius.

The boat is 137 feet in length, has a beam of fourteen feet and six inches and a depth of hold of eight feet. Its draught will b three feet and seven inches. As it will li in the water it will present only three feet of free board along its whole hull, save at of free board along its whole hull, save at the forward part, where the whale-back deck will have a rise of some five feet from the water's edge. The chances are that the long, low craft will go right through the seas like a swordfish, without waiting to mount the waves. She is to carry a second-ary battery of, two six-pounder rapid-fire guns, presumably to be mounted somewhere on her turtle-back.

In the Lydecker Court-Martial Regardin the Bad Work on the Aqueduct Tunn-and How It Was Concealed. WASHINGTON, March 29.—Before the Ly-decker court-marshal yesterday Thomas the holes left. The workmen always had a "guide" to inform them when the lieutenant or Kirlin was coming. Some one would whistle or send word down by the cars, and be built so that a person passing along the floor of the tunnel could not see the bad work. He said that if Major Lydecker had come into the tunnel once a day not one-half as much bad work could have been done. Emery, the sub-contractor, gave orders to do the work badly and to build up the bulk-heads to conceal the cavities. Several workingmen employed on the tunnel testified that they did not know and had never seen Major Lydecker. Some of the forementatified that they excelled extrement from testified that they received extra pay from the sub-contractors. They received this money under fictitious names.

Four Americans Resist Arrest by Two Mexican Officers and Shoot Them Down—The Murderers Escape.

El. Paso, Tex., March 29.—Four Americans from El Paso shot and killed two Mexican policemen last night in Paso del Norte. The Americans were raising considerable disturbance by shooting off their pistols and overturning apple stands, when the police attempted to arrest them. One of the Americans opened fire on the officers and shot one dead. The ball went in at the back of the Mexican's neck and came out through his tongue. A second shot brought down the second policeman, fatally wounded.

The American rowdies then ran for the river, closely pursued by Mexican soldiers. Three of them jumped into the Rio Grande and swam across, while the fourth crossed on the bridge and was fired a three times by the Mexican guard. Fully 200 Mexicans came over to El Paso to demand the arrest of the guilty parties. Everybody here is greatly excited.

THE FALL RIVER STRIKE ENDED.

Lack of Funds Causes a Collapse of the Weavers' Strike—The Struggie Results in Nothing but Loss to the Working FALL RIVER, Mass., March 28.-The weavers' strike is over and it is expected that every loom in the city will be in operation to-day. The recommendation to return to work was first broached Tuesday afternoon at the meeting of the executive committee. Remittances from out of town which were expected in the afternoon failed to arrive, and the relief fund which at noon amounted to several hundred dollars was quickly exhausted, while applicants were still clamor-ing for assistance. The executive officers then announced that no more relief would be granted that day and held a secret meeting at which the more conservative members advised that as the union had no funds and as outside contributions had wholly failed their expectations it was injudicious to continue the strike, and urged that the weavers be requested to return to work. This advice was opposed by many and no one seemed willing to announce to the weavers that the strike had failed. that the strike had failed.

Finally a compromise was effected by which the committee was appointed to wait on Rev. Brown, of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, who has afforded the strikterian Church, who has afforded the strik-ers much assistance, and asked his advice and co-operation. Mr. Brown agreed with the members who counseled an end of the strike and promised his aid in announcing the result to the strikers. Wednesday morn-ing the executive committee held another meeting which lasted from eight o'clock un-til after ten, and adopted a resolution to the effect that the committee advised the strikeffect that the committee advised the strik-ers to return to work under protest, and submit their case to the State Board of Arbitration. The mass meeting yesterday morning was not at first inclined to accept he recommendation, but after explanations by Rev. Mr. Brown and members of the ex-scutive committee, it was voted to return to work to-day. work to-day.

A number of the weavers favored continuing the strike, but when the situation was explained admitted that the decision was the best that could be arrived at.

JOHN BRIGHT'S DEATH.

Universal Sorrow Throughout England on Account of the Demise of the Great Commoner. LONDON, March 28.-John Bright, the English statesman, died at 8:30 o'clock English statesman, died at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday morning. Mr. Bright's end was peaceful, and his physicians say that it was painless. He had remained in a comatose condition since Tuesday afternoon and died without regaining consciousness. All his family were present at his death.

The flags of both the Liberal and Tory clubs were fiving at half-mark vesteday in clubs were flying at half-mast yesterday in honor of the memory of John Bright, each party claiming the dead statesman as its own. Every evening newspaper printed a leader eulogizing the famous Birmingham commoner and the commoner and the Home Rulers, one and all, have forgotten Mr. Bright's Unionist sentiments, of ten strongly expressed, in their admiration of the sterling qualities of the man. No arrangements will be to becoming the great man's successor. It is unlikely, however, that such a move on the part of the Radical leader will be countenanced, and if the dead man's youngest son, who is a staunch Unionist, will accept the candidacy he will be returned to his father's seat without opposition as an ex-pression of the esteem in which John Bright was held by his political friends and oppo nents alike.

For the last ten years Mr. Bright was in visible process of decay. His once resonant voice began to fail when he joined Mr. Glad-stone's Cabinet in 1880, and his Parliamentary career practically closed when he quitted the Ministry on account of the bombardment of Alexandria, a step on the part of the government which he never could be brought to justify or even excuse.

AN IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

The Boundary Line Between California and Lower California Should be Sixty Miles South of the Present Line, Thus Giving to the United States the Alleged Gold

SAN FRANCISCO, March 28.—A special to the Examiner from Ensenada, Lower California, says the startling and important dis-covery has been made that the boundary line between California and Lower California, as between California and Lower California, as fixed by the treaty of Guadaloupe Hidalgo, should be sixty miles south of the line now recognized, and that therefore Ensenada and the alleged gold fields are within United States territory. The error by which the present boundary came into recogniton is explained as follows:

The treaty prescribes that the boundary lines shall be drawn from the mouth of the Colorado west to the Pacific Ocean. The Colorado west to the Pacific Ocean. The English maps of that time incorrectly marked the Gila river as the Colorado. The line was therefore drawn from the mouth of the Gila west. It should have been drawn sixty miles farther south from the point where the Colorado empties into the Gulf of California. If this be true, the International Land Company's title to its property being granted by Mexico, is null and void.

A GOOD APPOINTMENT.

The New General Passenger Agent of the New York Central & Hudson River Ratt-

New York Central & Hudson River Railroad.

George H. Daniels, at present vice-chairman of the Central Traffic Association and chairman of the Chicago Eastbound Passenger Committee, has been appointed general passenger agent of the New York Central railroad, to succeed Henry Monett, who died several months ago.

The appointment meets the approval of the press of the country as well as that of railway officials generally. Mr. Daniels brings not only rare experience in railway matters to the position he is called to fill, but has the additional accomplishment of acquaintance with itemspaper work, hisfirst practical experience in business being in a newspaper office in a Western city.

The following are a few of the press comments:

Mr. Daniels is somewhat portly in figure, of florid complexion and is genial in manners. Conservative in his methods, he brings to his new position a wide experience in practical railroad matters, a thorough acquaintance with the system of association among the roads, ability, industry and conscientiousness.—N. Y. Tribune.

Mr. Daniels has certainly won the promotion to the head of the passenger department of one of the greatest railway systems in America.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The general passenger agency of the New York Central is regarded as the most desirable position of that kind in the United States with the possible exception of that of the Pennsylvania road, and unusual interest has been manifested in the question of who would be the lucky successor of the late incumbent.

round and achieve a high position in the service.—Chicago Times.

All who know Mr. Daniels will concede the wisdom of his choice by the New York Central management as the chief executive officer of the general passenger department. He has had a ripe and varied experience in passenger affairs that peculiarly qualifies him for the place. His capacity for detail and his robust constitution also fit him for the great responsibilities and exacting duties that will devolve upon him. Ho stands high among all classes of railroad officials as a man of intelligence, tact, perseverance, untiring energy and sound judgment.

If there are any characteristics in his make up more marked than others, they are the extreme affability, unostentation and genial disposition which render him so easy of approach and have made him one of the most universally popular railway men to be found in the United States. If the warm affection of his immediate associates to be found in the United States. If the warm affection of his immediate associates and the respect, esteem and best wishes of all others who know Mr. Daniels can insure his success, he will certainly add to the sturdy character of his past record by his future administration of the New York Central's passenger interests. — Buffalo Courier

Central's passenger interests.— Buffaio Courier.

Delay in filling the vacancy was due to a desire to secure the right man, and President Depew and the other executives think they have found him.—N. Y. Times.

Perhaps no passenger man in the country is better known or more popular than he, and certainly none is better qualified to fill the important office of general passenger agent of a great road like the New York Central.—Railway Age.

A Thrilling and Romantic Story of Love and Adventure.

BY JAMES M. MERRILL AUTHOR OF "BOGUS BILL" "FISHER JOE" AND. OTHER STORIES,

[Copyright, 1889, by the A. N. Kellogg News paper Company.]

CHAPTER XV. "Gone! The will gone? If you have lost that paper, Seekmore Gripes, I'll be the death of you," cried Captain Starbright, in a stern voice, in which anger and alarm were

The third man stepped forward.

It was Austin Wentword, the young mechanic. He was well clad, and there was a look of interest manifest on his frank, handsome face. He had been in deep trouble during the past few weeks on account of his quarrel with Grace. To-day, however, a change had come over the spirit of his "The wind must have blown it out the window," returned the lawyer. "A look outside will make everything plain sailing Procuring the lamp Mr. Gripes leaned out into the night, flashing the glow up and down the porch that ran the length of that side of the house. He saw nothing of the lost paper, and as there was scarcely a movement of air, it was not likely that the document had been cast out by the wind.

R was but a few feet from the window to the porch, and both men proceeded at once

No discoveries were made, however, save that the imprint of a foot was found in the garden where the ground was soft and

The track was followed to the sidewalk where all trace was lost.

"Somebody is on to your tricks, Captain," said Mr. Gripes, after the twain stood once more in the lawyer's room.

A black look came to the face of the discomfited Captain.

"It seems evident that a theft has either been committed, or else —"

The ferret eyes of the lawyer were fixed in a keen gaze on the face of the speaker.
"Well, Captain?"
"Or otherwise you are playing a double game!"

"Indeed! I am a gentleman, sir."

"Doubtless."

"I have professional honor at stake, Captain Starbright. Rather than go contriby to my convictions of right, sir, I would pluck out my right eye."

An incredulous smile moved the tawny mustache of the Captain.

mustache of the Captain.

The lawyer did not seem to be offended, however. Evidently he understood the man he was dealing with perfectly. It would be a hard matter to abraid the feelings of a man like Seekmore Gripes, who had been for more than forty years a criminal defender of the most conscienceless type.

His class exist and prey on the public in all large towns as the reader knows, and all large towns, as the reader knows, and in giving his character an airing no offense is meant toward that large class of honoris meant toward that large class of honorable men who make law their calling in life.

There was no disguising the fact that the will was lost. Gripes knew that it was stolen, the Captain could not be sure. In any event he was puzzled and deeply chagrined.

"I do not understand it," finally muttered Captain Starbright. "Who could wish to destroy the will?"

"That is not for me to say. You ought to

"That is not for me to say. You ought to

"I can think of but-one who would be beneffect by such villamy," said the Captain.
"Who is that?" "Mrs. Peproy."

"It can not be that she has had a hand in this. She hasn't the requisite nerve to do such a thing."

"I find them the hardest cases in my experiwidow, without life enough to more than exist, has compassed ten miles of space at right, watched your movements with the keen eyes of a detective, and at an opportune moment smatched this precious paper from your table?" "Then you imagine that she, that faded

"I can't say that I do. It is for you to draw inferences."
"Do you intend to go back on me, Mr.

Gripes?"
"Not if you show proper shrewdness."
"What would you advise?"
"That you find that will at the earliest

"That you find the will as will be possible moment."

"But that may be impossible. The one who would steal the will would not hesitate to destroy it."

"True groupsh."

"True enough." "If the will is destroyed we lose every

"Undoubtedly."

"Undoubtedly."

"Mrs. Penroy being the only direct living heir to Morgan Vandible would inherit every thing. I know she hates me and she would not hesitate to —"

"I see, I see," interrupted Mr. Gripes. "But you must excuse me from further consideration of the case to-night. It may be necessary for you to employ a detective. If this woman you mention is so timid and weak, she would hardly dare destroy the will. It may be that she will be open to compromise. Move cautiously, Captain, and see her at the earliest moment. It's a compromise. Move cautiously, Captain, and see her at the earliest moment. It's a bad piece of business anyhow."

Then the little man resumed his seat at the table and turned his back on his client.

Ignored completely.

This move on the part of the wily lawyer did not please Captain Starbright, and he secretly resolved on revenge at some future The Captain promised to call again and The Captain promised to call again and then departed. He had left his horse at one of the hotel stables. The distance was nearly half a mile. He had proceeded but a few rods when a pedestrian brushed against him proceeding from the opposite direction. At the same moment the Captain felta hand touch his. As the stranger swept on Captain Starbright felt a bit of folded paragraphs.

tering air.

"You are prisoners," declared the foremost man, sternly.

"Ha! doth the Doge dare insult his friends thus? We will not give up the precious documents we have risked so much to gain," cried Don Benito, fiercely. Then, ere those present could comprehend his intentions, he bent low and darted swiftly at the officer in the doorway. His head struck the fellow in the pit of the stomach and doubled him up like a jack-knife.

Captain Starbright felt a bit of folded paper in his paim.

Quickly he turned about and called after the pedestrian. No answer was vouchsafed. Then the Captain hastened on until the rays of a street lamp greeted his vision. Under this he paused, and consulted the paper so strangely thrust into his possession.

"CLINTON STARBRIGHT: The storm you have invoked will soon burst. I give you fair warning that you may be on the defensive. Nothing you can now do will save you from the gallo ws you have dared to win the Vandiole millions. The old millionaire left a will, not the one to which his name was forged—you are left out in the cold.

A FORMER FRIEND."

The note puzzled and enraged the Captain. His thoughts reverted at once to the person who had once before thrust a note of warning into his hand—Louis Fingal. Doubtless his hand was in this although the penmanship was not similar.

"RR my soull" clausieted Captain Star-

"After him!" gasped the panting officer.
"No use," said Fingal, "the old chap is beyond your reach. Neither my friend nor myself will attempt to run, but we demand to know why we have thus been ing into his hand—housh has hand was in this although the penmanship was not similar.

"By my soul!" ejaculated Captain Starbright, as he continued on his way, "this note inspires me with new hope. I can see the hound that is working against me. I am not the only one who seeks to win the Yandble millions. Who is that other! Not Mrs. Penroy; no, no; but that greasy mechanic, Wentword, and this young Louis Fingal is in league with him. It is plain enough now. The boorish mechanic has more wit than I gave him credit for. This note was written to frighten me and leave every thing to him. It won't work. I will not be frightened from the track. I have gone too far for that—too many lives lie under my Eat."

Then the captain thought of the mention

"Yes."
"Yes."
Fingal and his companion laughed.
"Mr. Wentword and myself are respectable persons, as we can prove. You have made a grand mistake."
Then the policeman began offering an apology. Wentword assured him it was not "I'm sore from that old fellow's head vade. No one saw the forgery. Wentword is at the bottom of the theft, and I'll turn my attention to him immediately. Poor fool! He will find that he can not tamper "A half-crazed fellow," explained Fingal.

fool! He will find that he can not tamper with my plans with impunity."

In the meantime the person who had brushed against the Captain and pressed the note into his hand hurried down the street without once looking behind him. At the intersection of another street he turned down and moved with rapid strides toward that part of the little city bordering on a river. He entered an alley-way, passed through a side door and up a flight of stairs, opening another door, admitting him into a small, dimly-lighted apartment, occupied by two persons.
